

The proposed Federal Law did not go far enough and truth be told neither did Wisconsin's, but at least Wisconsin's went further than the federal law would. What has happened to states' rights? I have and pay for a telephone for my convenience, not the telemarketers. I should not have to tolerate unsolicited calls or calls from businesses I no longer do business with. After this last election, I would also like to add political messages. I had 26 calls in one day from computers that would not hang up when I did, which prevented me from using a service I paid for. If I have an emergency and they are tying up my line, who do I get to sue?
